PREFACE

Florence Hawley Ellis was active professionally her entire adult life, and after retiring she maintained extensive research notes and related collections at her home. She was assisted in her later years by her daughter Andrea, who inherited the Ellis house and its contents when Dr. Ellis died in 1991. Andrea Ellis then maintained the research materials as a private archive until her own death in 2009. At that point Andrea’s daughter, Rieka Eastin Long, inherited the house and its contents. Ms. Long allowed the Maxwell Museum to borrow and organize the Ellis research materials, on the assumption that in time, they will be donated to the University of New Mexico and other institutions.

One set of files from the Ellis house was an “autobibliography,” by which was meant a set of Dr. Ellis’s publications and manuscripts, as ordered by the author. Andrea Ellis clearly had a hand in the organizing of the bibliographic materials, and may have contributed most of the effort required to create such a comprehensive series of files. The first researcher to take a close look at those files, Dr. Kurt Anschuetz, recognized the need to keep the bibliographic files intact, and convinced me to do so. The actual work of organizing the files then fell to Alicia Barnes, of the museum staff, who prepared this compilation of the file contents.

Like the original files, this bibliography includes materials attributable to other individuals, especially her daughter. Andrea Ellis’s working relationship with her mother is indicated in the files by the conjoining of their publications and manuscripts, a structure maintained in the bibliography. Also, both women went by more than one name during their careers; in the bibliography we have followed the names indicated by the documents and file labels.

The catalogue numbers assigned by the museum are based on the system originally used to organize the files. Catalogue No. 2010.41.1929c refers, for example, to the contents of Ellis’s file 1929c. In some cases it was necessary to deviate from the original numbering system used in the files, including to add materials from a different part of the collections to the bibliographic files. Nonetheless, this publication will give readers a sense of the publications and manuscripts created by Dr. Ellis and her daughter, as organized by them.

While the documents summarized by this bibliography provide a comprehensive picture of the work by Dr. Ellis and her collaborators, there are gaps in the collection. We will strive to fill those gaps as part of the long-term curation of the files. Meanwhile, unless otherwise indicated, the items listed are available for examination by researchers. As one consequence, we hope, the extent and variety of Dr. Ellis’s research will be more fully appreciated. We wish to thank Rieka Long for her own efforts to make these materials available for research.
